Author's Notes:
To clear up any confusion a FYI: It is not a typo. I wrote the right thing. Think about it.

Lars watched with his two bandmates as the door shut behind their fourth.

It was necessary for their quartet to become, at least temporarily, a trio if the band was to survive. While the departure was necessary, it didn't erase that gnawing feeling of guilt for being relieved that finally all the drama was over.

No one should be relieved when a brother leaves.

For once he couldn't think of anything to say to Cliff and James, so he said the first thing that came into his head.

"At least there are sandwiches for the rest of us now."
